

The British Accounting and Finance Association
Financial Accounting and Reporting Special Interest Group

Invites you to attend a one-day Symposium on

The Future of Financial Reporting 2016: Measurement, transparency and decision-making

8th January 2016
9.30am-4.00pm
Hosted by the ACCA
The Adelphi,
1-11 John Adam Street,
London, WC2N 6AU

This Symposium brings together a series of high profile speakers to discuss the future of financial reporting. Financial reporting is at an interesting juncture. Against a background of continuing economic uncertainty there have been continuing Evolution and Development of accounting in areas such as corporate governance, financial regulation, accounting standards and Integrated Reporting.

This one-day symposium aims to explore some of these issues. It provides a forum for both practitioners and academics to hear and engage in discussion with the following well-informed speakers. The symposium presentations and discussions should also serve as a valuable teaching aid for those academics engaged in financial reporting and contemporary issues in accounting.

Nick Anderson	Investment Manager & Head of Equity Research, Henderson Global Investors: Can financial reporting improve long term investment decisions?
Anne McGeachin	International Accounting Standards Board: Measurement in financial statements
Veronica Poole	UK Head of Accounting and Corporate Reporting, Deloitte LLP: Current initiatives in transparent corporate reporting
Richard Slack	Professor in Accounting, Durham University Business School: Capital market perspectives on Integrated Reporting
Richard Taffler	Professor of Finance and Accounting, Warwick Business School: Accounting for emotions
