

Introducing one of our keynote speakers at the 2026 Annual Conference, Professor Christine Cooper.

Christine Cooper is a professor of accounting at Edinburgh University. Her research is concerned with the economic, political and social impact of accounting on our everyday lives. This has produced publications in diverse social arenas including social and environmental accounting, gender, privatisation, deskilling of accountants and bookkeepers, insolvency, taxation, accountability and accounting in the South African apartheid era. She is currently working on a project concerned with government accountability and prisons. She holds a PhD from the University of Strathclyde and a Masters' degree from the London School of Economics. Christine is on the editorial boards of several international academic journals.